CULTURE & MUSEUMS

WOOLEN MILL MUSEUM

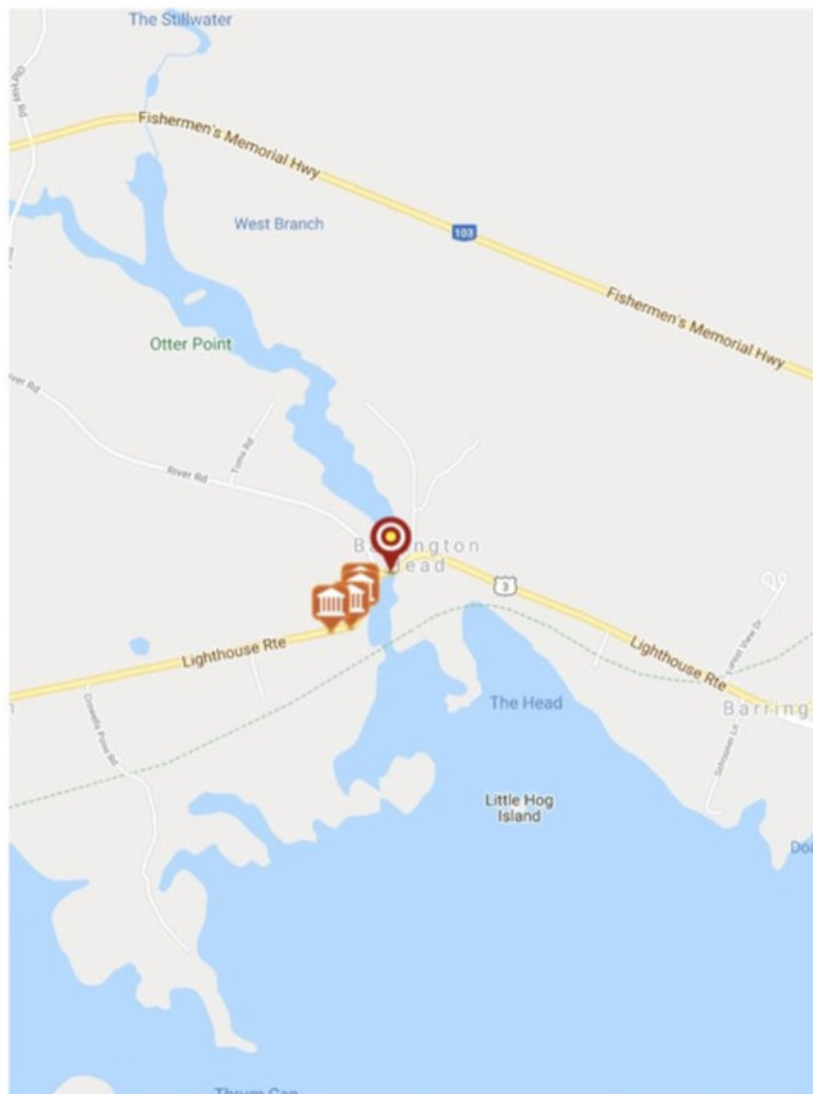

Barrington Woolen Mill Museum

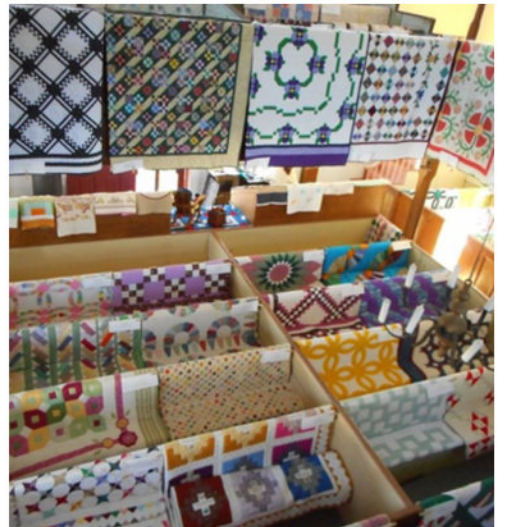

The Barrington Woolen Mill was a thriving producer of woolens in the late 19th and early 20th century when life in rural Nova Scotia required warm durable clothing. Powered by a water-driven turbine, the mill washed, picked, carded, spun, dyed and wove the wool.

See the machinery that transformed raw fleece into yarn and cloth, and listen to the stories about the lives of the local mill workers. Imagine the steady rhythms of the spinner, twister, carder, skeiner, picker and loom that once were powered by the Barrington River's rushing water.

You can learn just how important the Barrington River was to the Mi'kmaq, the Acadians and those that came after them.

Guests are encouraged to try carding, spinning and weaving wool and watch the interpretive guides as they wash and dye locally sourced wool by hand.

OLD MEETING HOUSE MUSEUM

The Old Meeting House Museum

For two centuries people have gathered at the Old Meeting House for township business and religious worship. A National Historic Site, this New England-style meeting house is the oldest non-conformist house of worship in Canada and among the oldest in North America. Built in 1765 by Congregationalist fishermen and farmers from Cape Cod, referred to as the New England Planters, the Meeting House was a building-in-progress for its first hundred years until the windows, doors, box pews, and a pulpit were added in the mid-1800s.

Inside you will see period "graffiti" and listen to the remarkable acoustics as you speak from the pulpit. Visitors are encouraged to try writing with a quill and ink, blowing bubbles and playing games 18th-century-style! Outside viewing the landscape and and graveyard, you can learn about the first people to inhabit Kespugwitk/Nova Scotia, the Mi'kmaq, as well as learn about the early French, Acadian and Planter settlers of L'Acadie and the Township of Barrington.

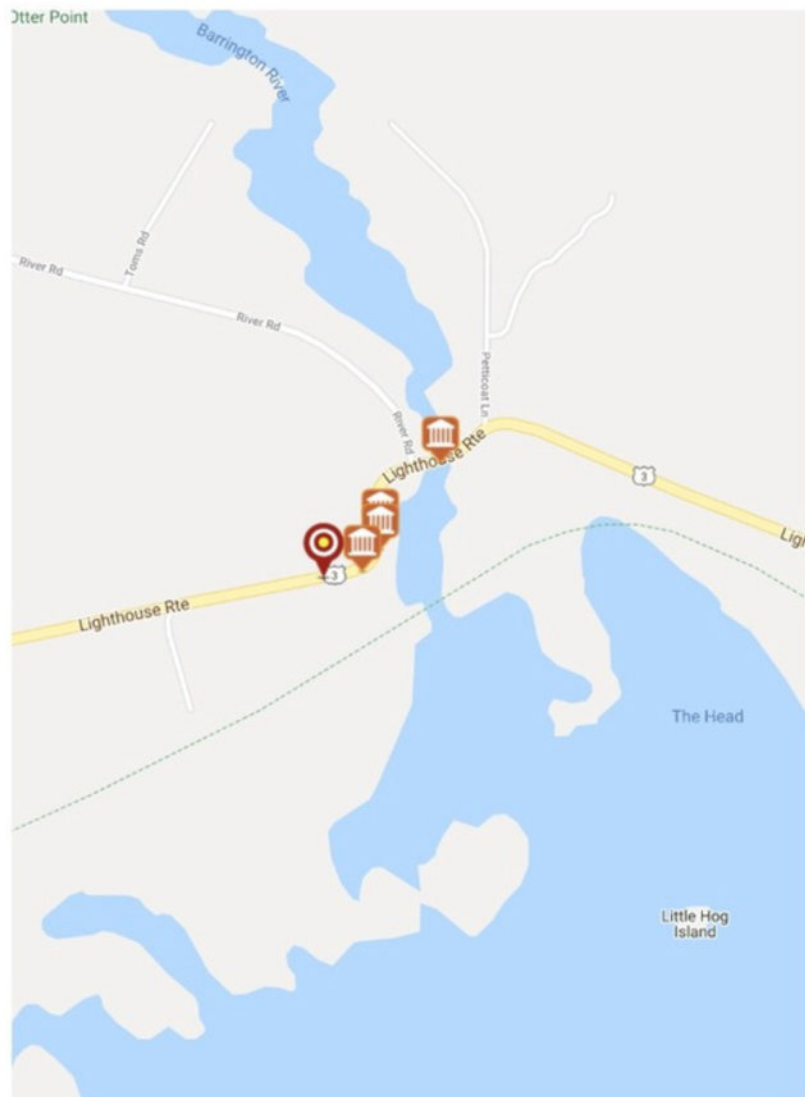

SEAL ISLAND LIGHT MUSEUM

Seal Island Light Museum

A unique experience awaits visitors to the scenic community of Barrington on Nova Scotia's South Shore, where the Seal Island Lighthouse Museum had stood sentinel by the headwaters of the Barrington River for 30 years. Operated by the Cape Sable Historical Society, visitors can tour the five story, 35 foot tall replica of the original 60 foot lighthouse whose beacon still guides mariners from Seal Island, which is located approximately 18 miles offshore.

Inside the museum are numerous artifacts from the local area chronicling the lives of local lighthouse keepers and the area's rich seafaring history. The museum houses the second order Fresnel lens, which was in use from 1902 to 1978 in the Seal Island Lighthouse as well as the 4th order lens that was used at the Bon Portage Light. A panoramic view of Barrington Bay is visible from the top of the lighthouse museum.

OLD COURT HOUSE

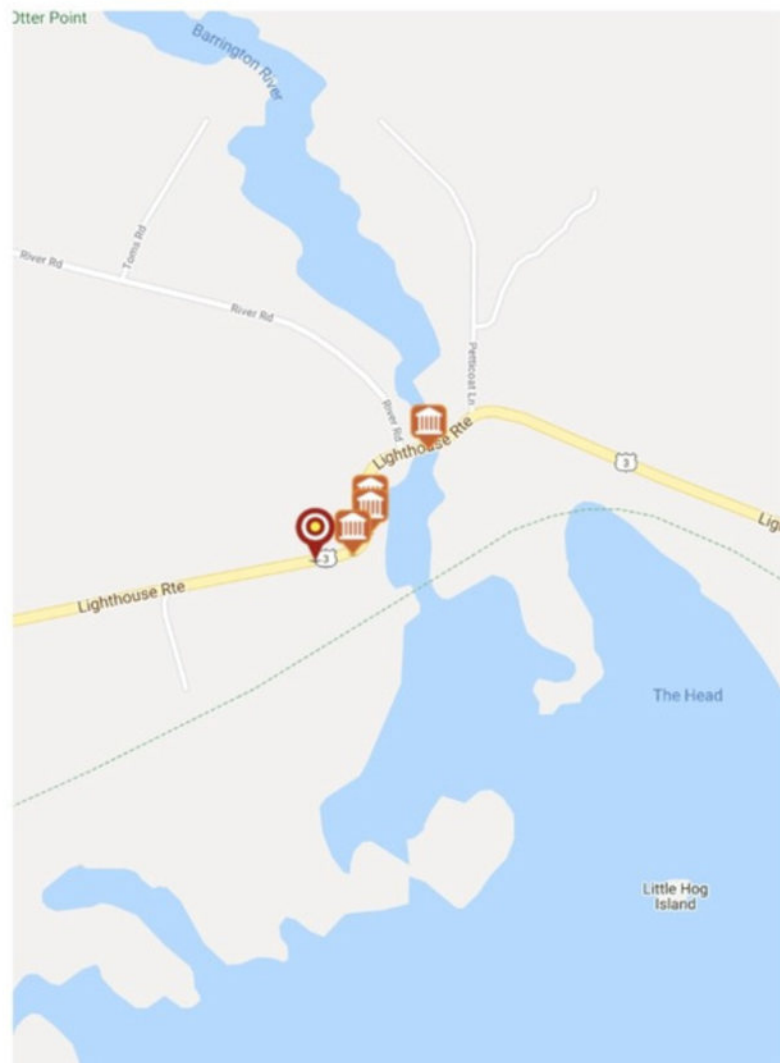

Old Court House

Located in Barrington, on Nova Scotia's South Shore, the Old Court House, which was built in 1843 and is the third-oldest courthouse in Nova Scotia houses a collection of local indigenous artifacts, a collection of over 4000 military artifacts, and other community related exhibits as well as a new exhibit on Fort Saint Louis National Historic Site.

Among the military artifacts are mementos from World Wars I and II, the Korean War and other military operations. You'll see cannonballs dating back to the 1600s, numerous uniforms and medals of merit and valour, and a large collection of historic photographs on display. A unique item in this collection is an ejection seat from a CF100 fighter jet used by a local serviceman.

Artifacts relating to the early New England Planter settlers are featured as well.

A well appointed tax-free gift shop featuring museum and locally made items is an added feature at this historic site.

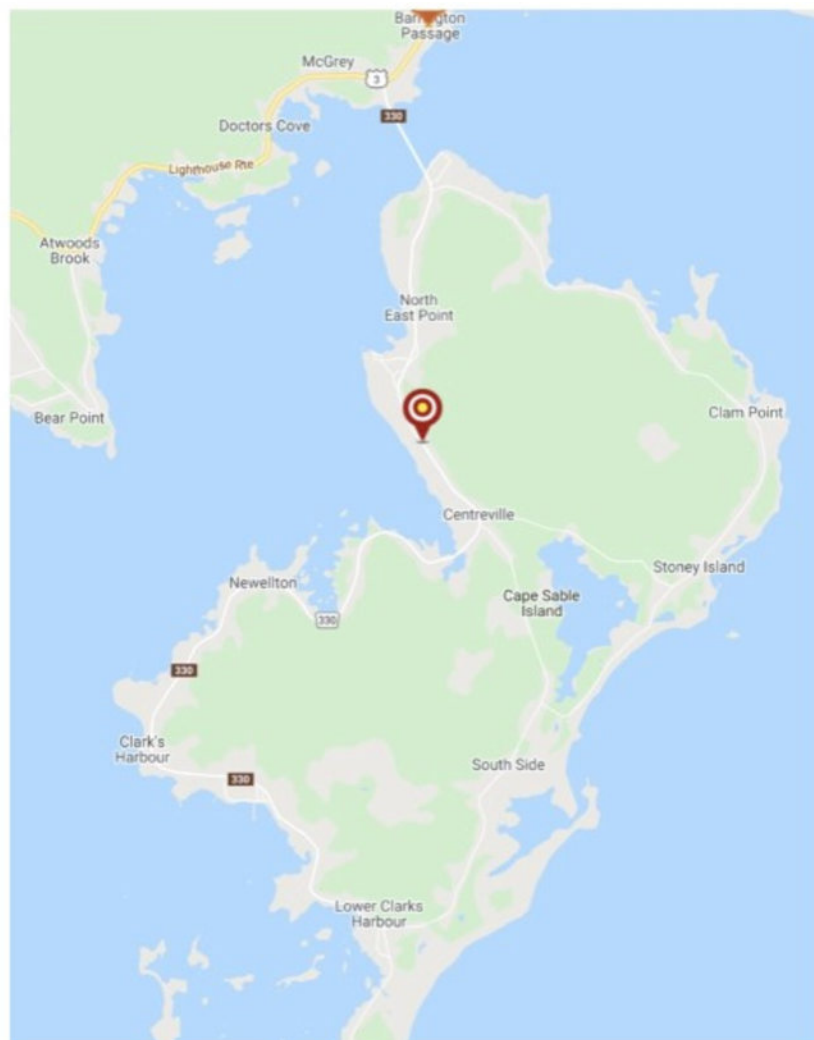

ARCHELAUS SMITH MUSEUM

The Archelaus Smith Museum

At the Archelaus Smith Museum visitors can learn about fishing techniques and gear, shipwrecks, the famous Cape Island boat, and much more as they walk around the 125 year old building.

Archelaus Smith came to Barrington in 1761 with his wife Elizabeth and their children, then to Cape Sable Island, becoming the first New England settler here to leave descendants.

The museum is located at 915 Highway 330, Centerville, Cape Sable Island.

SHAG HARBOUR UFO MUSEUM

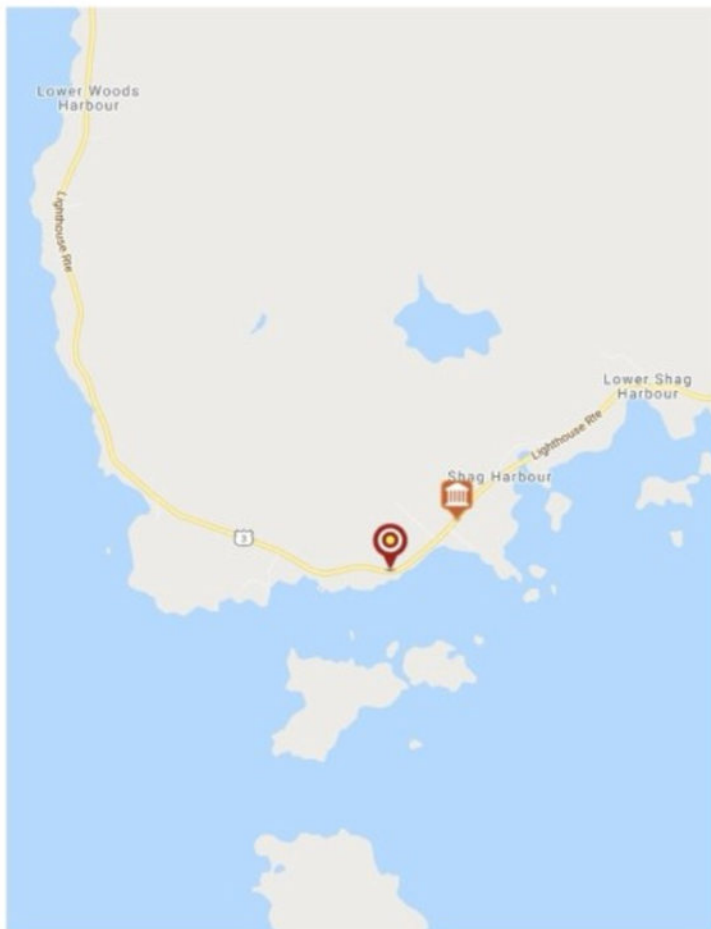

The Shag Harbour UFO Museum

On October 1967 the first government documented UFO was spotted crashing into the ocean just off the coast of Shag Harbour. The orange lights disappeared under the surface only leaving a yellow foam behind which is still a mystery to this day.

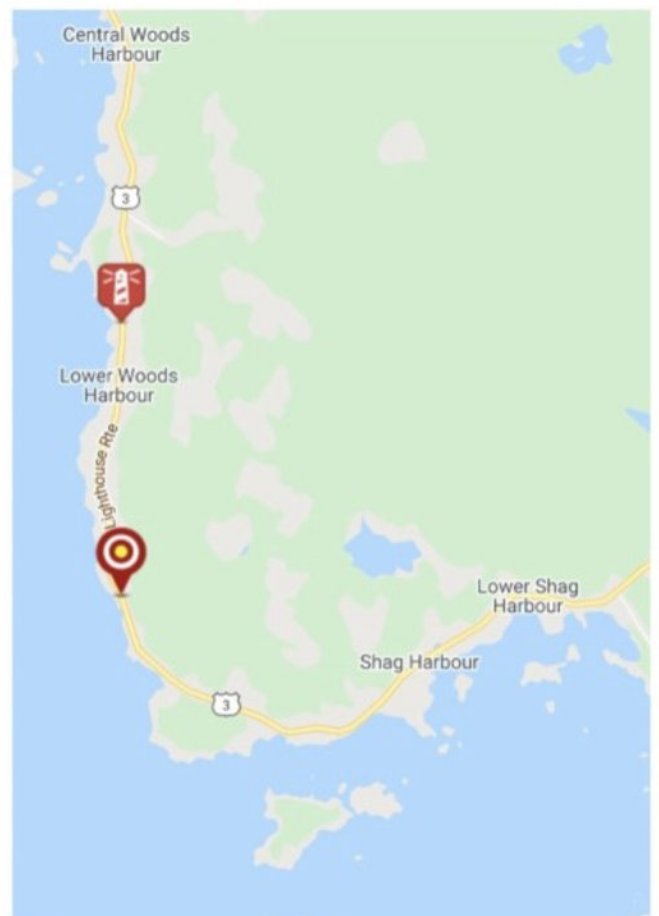

At the museum visitors can learn more about this incident by watching videos, reading the newspaper articles, and asking the workers. Guests can also drive down the road to the very spot where the UFO crashed 54 years ago, as well as a UFO themed lobster sculpture and a giant lobster chair.

The Museum and Crash site are located 3 minutes from each other. The museum is located at 5615, Nova Scotia Trunk 3, Shag Harbour.
